Richard Oliver

Richard Oliver is director and design team head at Exorna Kitchens in Coleraine. With an Honours degree in Engineering he knows how to design kitchens that are functional, efficient and built to last. But it's his creativity and passion for innovative design that his clients appreciate most. It's his talent for creating fresh, inspiring interior spaces. It's his firm commitment to ensuring his clients get an outstanding result and a kitchen they'll enjoy for years to come.

As a kitchen design specialist, Richard knows how important the kitchen is to modern life. As the hub of the home, it's the place to gather, cook a meal, and entertain friends. But every life is unique. So for each client, he creates a bespoke space to suit his or her needs. This approach requires extra attention to detail and an appreciation for his clients' individual lifestyles.

That's why Richard personally oversees each project from concept to completion. He invests time working through the details to make sure his customers get quality and value for money every time - no exceptions. Because Richard believes that reliability, quality and value are every bit as important today as they were 30 years ago when his father set up the business.

Richard appreciates the personal investment required to refurbish or install a new kitchen. So he makes a special effort to listen to his customers. Whether he's designing a brand new kitchen or handling a renovation, he spends the time to get it right. He'll go the extra distance and share the latest features, innovations and trends. He'll help with the overall interior scheme of his clients' homes, and give advice on tiles, lighting, and wall coverings.

He'll make the experience as easy and hassle free as possible. That's why Richard only uses his team of trusted craftsmen. He relies on a staff of experts that are as dedicated to quality as he is. Fully trained and insured, his fitters work carefully and cleanly to minimise disruption to his client's lives. Polite, tidy and courteous, they take pride in their work. As a talented designer with deep industry experience, Richard knows how to create high-quality kitchens perfectly suited to his clients' lifestyles. But it's his vision for providing complete customer care and great value that truly sets him apart from the competition.
